Title: Parental Alienation: A Child Psychology Approach: It is a Denial of Attachment

Author: Kneier PhD, Gary J. Publisher: Gary J. Kneier, Ph.D

Order Information: <http://www.drgary.ca/>

Author Contact/Web: garykneier@gmail.com

DESCRIPTION: Dr. Kneier's focus is on the child—on what happens inside the child's mind and heart when confronted with intense conflict between divorcing parents. This book shows that, for the majority of cases, the denial-of-attachment to one parent is not principally caused by deliberate alienating influences by the favored parent. Rather, the "alienation" is a serious denial-based psychological symptom occasioned by the stress of parental conflict. It is a "denial-of-attachment" to one parent that arises as a solution, albeit a pathological one, to the impossibility of maintaining loyalty to two warring parents. As such, it is a serious psychological disturbance that no amount of blaming or argument can remedy. Many therapists, lawyers, and judges in Canada have found it very helpful.
